

More news on Site Updates

Posted by : admin on Oct 09, 2007 - 06:46 AM

Site Updates

Feedback from consumers on Topical Spiro's effect on the hairline, site updates, etc. Some final notes on updates to the HairlossTalk Site, including new features, products, etc. We are continuing to grow!

We are starting to get some really good comments regarding topical Spironolactone, which is a fairly well known antiandrogen, however not widely used due to its "custom preparation" requirements.

So far some of our users have reported thickening of hairline after a month or two on it. We will continue to let you know what we learn as more develops.

More sections will be added to the site in the coming weeks, and we will be teaming with some other hair loss sites to share resources and bring more value to you.

Please don't forget to join us every weekday evening in the Live Chat if you have any questions or concerns about what to do, where to go with your treatments, or just to talk.

The Discussion Forum <http://www.hairlosstalk.com/interact/> continues to grow. Don't forget to check back there regularly.

HLT